

Categories

Classifying involves organizing elements into groups based on their similarities. One of the critical elements of classifying is identifying the rules that govern class or category membership. Teacher-directed classification tasks are those for which students are given the elements to classify and the categories into which the elements should be placed. Student-directed classification tasks are those in which students are given the items to classify but must form the categories themselves.